Hi everyone! Welcome back to another English Extravaganza! Did you know that this Sunday is Mother's Day? It's the same day in the United States, too. It's a big holiday. Mother's Day is a special day to celebrate mothers and grandmothers. It is a day when we show our respect and say "thank you" to our moms.

In the United States, Mother's Day is one of the biggest days for flowers and greeting cards. Every year, I send my mom a bouquet of flowers. Living in another country is not an excuse! I still sent her flowers this year, even though I live so far away. Speaking of which, Mother's Day is also the biggest holiday for long-distance telephone calls. I'm looking forward to having a good chat with my mom on Sunday.

Sunday brunch is also very popular on Mother's Day. Brunch is the applepen of meals. You have breakfast and you have lunch. Put them together and you have brunch. Brunch is usually later than breakfast but earlier than lunch. You can have waffles and pancakes or sandwiches and salad. Because it is a popular thing to do, restaurants that serve brunch are usually very crowded on Mother's Day.

Small children make gifts for their mothers and grandmothers. Handprints and even footprints are common gifts for mothers of little kids and babies. Sometimes, schools and teachers help children make their gifts.

So, what will you do for your mom for Mother's Day? That's all for this time. See you next time!
